

THE CENTRAL EUROPEAN UNIVERSITY
NATIONALISM STUDIES PROGRAM

cordially invites you to a lecture by

Justin Gest

(George Mason University)

Crossroads: An Analysis of Immigration Regimes in 30 Countries

How do different countries vary in their approaches to governing immigration? Why do these differences emerge? What is the future of immigration governance? This lecture will share the results from a groundbreaking analysis of immigration demographic data from 30 important destination countries in the Global North and South. These annual data cover total immigration flows, break it down by visa type, and consider naturalization rates to generate a global typology of immigration regimes. Based on the results, we consider what drives the trends that emerge.

Monday, 24 September at 5.30 p.m.
Nádor 15 Tiered 103

Justin Gest is an Assistant Professor of Public Policy at George Mason University's Schar School of Policy and Government. He studies immigration and the politics of demographic change. He is the author of four books: Apart: Alienated and Engaged Muslims in the West (Oxford University Press/Hurst 2010); The New Minority: White Working Class Politics in an Age of Immigration and Inequality (Oxford University Press 2016); The White Working Class: What Everyone Needs to Know (Oxford University Press 2018); and Crossroads: Comparative Immigration Regimes in Times of Demographic Change (Cambridge University Press 2018). He has also authored many peer-reviewed articles and provided commentaries and analysis for BBC, CNN, The Guardian, Los Angeles Times, NPR, Politico, Reuters, Vox, and The Washington Post. Professor Gest received the 2014 Joseph R. Levenson Memorial Teaching Prize, Harvard's highest award for faculty teaching. In 2013, he received the 2013 Star Family Prize for Student Advising, Harvard's highest award for student advising. In 2007, he co-founded the Migration Studies Unit at the London School of Economics (LSE).